

Luxury Villa Living

Sirena Blue

A villa is meant to be a true reflection of the owner's personality. In this case, we are dealing with an adventurous pair who love the sea and navigation and who want to establish their own community on the island, specifically in Punta Cana. The owners understood they wanted to create a room that reflected all of their trips and memoirs, where they could breathe all of their memories gathered from all over the world, so they hired famous interior designer Patricia Reid and architect Antonio Imbert to create the incredible Sirena Blue villa.

DESCRIPTION

The thing that stands out the most is how each room in this house has a special and eye-catching decorating based on a different subject. The fact that every single element was chosen with love and attention is the sole thing that makes this place stand out. Each of them is devoted to a particular area of interest for the proprietors. A large fishbowl with corals and saltwater fish, for instance, sits in the middle of the master bedroom to symbolize the owners' appreciation of marine life.

This project allowed the interior designer to let her creativity run wild, and the outcome is this distinctive villa. She was able to perfectly incorporate all the small elements and antiques the owners had provided. Additionally, she was able to give the villa vitality and a purpose allowing visitors to truly enjoy the unique experience of staying at Sirena Blue.
